Here is the structured medical report based on the provided transcription:

Patient Information

Patient Name: Simran Parveen

Age: 29 years

Sex: Not specified

Patient History

The patient, Simran Parveen, presented with complaints of severe stomach ache, which started the previous night. She had taken an antacid but the pain persisted. She also reported bouts of vomiting last night and today morning. The patient has a history of similar stomach ache three months ago, which resolved with antacid treatment.

Symptoms

1. Severe stomach ache
2. Bouts of vomiting
3. Abdominal pain (verified by examination)

Diagnosis

Based on the patient's symptoms and medical history, the diagnosis is suspected to be food poisoning.

Treatment Plan

1. Administered an injection for temporary relief

2. Prescribed medication for one week to be taken after dinner

Recommendations

1. The patient is advised to return to the clinic if she experiences similar symptoms in the future.
2. The patient is instructed to submit the fee at the cash counter.

Note: The report does not specify the exact medication prescribed, as that information was not provided in the transcript. Also, while the diagnosis is suspected to be food poisoning, a more comprehensive diagnosis may require further testing and examination.
